this book presents a unified and systematic philosophical account of human actions and their explanation and it does it in the spirit of scientific realism in addition various other related topics such as psychological concept formation and the nature of mental events and states are discussed this is due to the fact that the key problems in the philosophy of psychology are interconnected to a high degree this interwovenness has affected the discussion of these problems in that often the same topic is discussed in several contexts in the book i hope the reader does not find this too frustrating the theory of action developed in this book especially in its latter half is a causalist one in a sense it can be regarded as an explication and refinement of a typical common sense view of actions and the mental episodes causally responsible for them it has of course not been possible to discuss all the relevant philosophical problems in great detail even if i have regarded it as necessary to give a brief treatment of relatively many problems rather i have concentrated on some key issues and hope that future research will help to clarify the rest there has been a philosophical upheaval recently in our understanding of the metaphysics of the mind the philosophy of mind and action has traditionally treated its subject matter as consisting of states and events and completely ignored the category of ongoing process so the mental things that happen experiences and actions have been taken to be completed events and not ongoing processes but events by their very nature as completed wholes are never present to the agent or subject only ongoing processes can be present to a subject in the way required for conscious experience and practical self knowledge this suggests that a proper understanding of processes is required to understand subjective experience and agency this volume explores the possibility and advantages of taking processes to be the subject matter of the philosophy of mind and action the central defining feature of the process argument is its use of the progressive as opposed to perfective aspect but beyond this philosophers working on the metaphysics of processes do not agree the contributors to this volume take up this argument in the metaphysics of processes are processes continuants are they particulars at all or should we rather be thinking of process activity as a kind of stuff process action and experience considers whether practical reasoning and practical self knowledge require thinking of action in process terms and it considers arguments for the processive nature of conscious experience mental action deserves a place among foundational topics in action theory and philosophy of mind recent accounts of human agency tend to overlook the role of conscious mental action in our daily lives while contemporary accounts of the conscious mind often ignore the role of mental action and agency in shaping consciousness this collection aims to establish the centrality of mental action for discussions of agency and mind the thirteen original essays provide a wide ranging vision of the various and nuanced philosophical issues at stake among the questions explored by the contributors are which aspects of our conscious mental lives are agential can mental action be reduced to and explained in terms of non agential mental states processes or events must mental action be included among the ontological categories required for understanding and explaining the conscious mind more generally does mental action have implications for related topics such as attention self knowledge self control or the mind body problem by investigating the nature scope and explanation of mental action the essays presented here aim to demonstrate the significance of conscious mental action for discussions of agency and mind mental action and the conscious mind will be of interest to scholars and graduate students working in philosophy of mind philosophy of action and philosophy of agency as well as to philosophically inclined cognitive scientists from the introduction this inquiry is concerned with the themes of praxis and action in four philosophic movements marxism existentialism pragmatism and analytic philosophy it is rare that these four movements are considered in a single inquiry for there are profound differences of emphasis focus terminology and approach represented by these styles of thought many philosophers believe that similarities among these movements are superficial and that a close examination of them will reveal only hopelessly unbridgeable cleavages while respecting the genuine fundamental differences of these movements this inquiry is undertaken in the spirit of showing that there are important common themes and motifs in what first appears to be a chaotic babble of voices i intend to show that the concern with man as an agent has been a primary focal point of each of these movements and further that each contributes something permanent and important to our understanding of the nature and context of human activity it is somewhat surprising to find out how little serious theorizing there is in philosophy and in social psychology as well as sociology on the nature of social actions or joint act hons in the sense of actions performed together by several agents actions performed by single agents have been extensively discussed both in philosophy and in psychology there is accordingly a booming field called action theory in philosophy but it has so far strongly concentrated on actions performed by single agents only we of course should not forget game theory a discipline that systematically studies the strategic interaction between several rational agents yet this important theory besides being restricted to strongly rational acting fails to study properly several central problems related to the conceptual nature of social action thus it does not adequately clarify and classify the various types of joint action except perhaps from the point of view of the agents utilities this book presents a systematic theory of social action because of its reliance on so called purposive causation and generation it is called the purposive causal theory this work also discusses several problems related to the topic of social action for instance that of how to create from this perspective the most central concepts needed by social psychology and sociology while quite a lot of ground is covered in the book many important questions have been left unanswered and many others unasked as well this book is an exploration of what it takes for an event to count as an action i first became interested in this topic nearly a decade ago while working on a different topic i kept coming across philosophers making claims about the nature of action that seemed false or at least dubious to me as a consequence i turned to the philosophy of action directly to get to the heart of the matter i have wrestled with this territory ever since i hope that with this book i have finally earned the intuitions that put me at odds with the philosophers i was originally reading this book develops ideas in part two of my doctoral dissertation which i wrote at queen s university in kingston ontario canada i loved being at queen s for both professional and personal reasons my thanks go to the social sciences and humanities research council of canada for financial support as a doctoral candidate steve leighton and ronald de sousa were readers for my dissertation they provided some early and invaluable challenges to the ideas developed here my deepest debt of gratitude is owed to david bakhurst my supervisor i learned a lot from david this book would not be the same without his help
